

AJCU Conference on Information Technology Management

Loyola University Chicago

MAY 12 - 15, 2013

WELCOME

Dear AJCU Colleagues,

Welcome to the 28th annual AJCU Conference on Information Technology Management, hosted by Loyola University Chicago.

Thanks to the contributions of many people, we've planned several great days of discussions, panels and presentations. Mixed among these sessions you'll find some terrific opportunities to socialize and explore, both on campus and throughout the city.

Spring is a wonderful time of year to visit Chicago, and we're very glad you've joined us this week. We hope you'll enjoy your stay.

Susan Malisch
Vice President & CIO
Loyola University Chicago

STAY CONNECTED

Join the conversation online by using the #citm2013 on Twitter. Our live Twitter feed will be viewable on Twitter, through the Conference website under the "Twitter Mashup" link and in presentation spaces.

Share your photos, live, using the SharyPic iPhone application. Once installed, search CITM2013. We'll be posting pictures throughout the Conference and invite you to upload yours as well! Don't have an iPhone, then visit the CITM website and click on "Photographs."

WRITE CITM HISTORY

This Conference is providing the opportunity to record, share and preserve the stories of our AJCU-CITM organization. While you're here take a moment to stop by room 214 of the Information Commons on Monday or Tuesday to share some of your thoughts and memories of the CITM. We'll have one of our project team there to help you contribute to the CITM story. It only takes five minutes to share and help build a rich story for the organization and for those technology leaders that will carry our mission forward. Please stop by and see us and share a thought.

INTERNET ACCESS

Please follow the instructions below to access Loyola University Chicago's wireless network at both the Lake Shore or Water Tower Campus.

ENABLE WIRELESS ACCESS

Be sure your device is setup to enable the discovery of wireless access points. On a Mac, make sure your Airport is turned on (located near the "clock" on your Mac). If the Airpot is turned on, turn it off and turn it back on again to refresh the available wireless networks. Select the "Loyola" network and click "Join."

Enabling wireless on a PC can vary depending on the brand of laptop. Your laptop may have a button on either side of the device or may require you to suppress the "Fn" key with the appropriate F-key (e.g. F3), simultaneously. Once you have enabled the wireless on your pc, check for the Wireless Network Connection (WNC) located at the bottom of the screen near the "clock." Hover over the WNC and "right-click" in order to select the "View Available Wireless Networks" option. Select the "Loyola" network and click "Connect."

STEP 1

Open a web browser on the device you wish to register. Go to netreg1.luc.edu (at the Lake Shore Campus) or netreg2.luc.edu (at the Water Tower Campus) in order to register your device. Select the "REGISTER NOW" option.

STEP 2

Select the "Loyola Students/Faculty/Staff" option. Select the type of device that you are registering from the list provided.

STEP 3

Scroll to the bottom and enter "confer28" without the quotation marks and the Conference password provided to you at registration. Select "Submit."

STEP 4

You should see a "Result" page. The registration process can take up to 5 minutes to complete. You will need to reboot and/or completely shut down and restart your PC or MAC device in order to complete the Wireless Network Registration process. You should then be able to open a web browser and surf the web.

NEED ASSISTANCE?

If you encounter any issues registering your device or accessing the Internet:

- Contact a member of the AJCU-CITM Support Team for assistance;
- Call 773-508-4487; or
- Visit the Information Commons, Room 203, at the Lake Shore Campus; or
- Visit the Corboy Law Center, Room 605, at the Water Tower Campus.

LAKE SHORE CAMPUS

WATER TOWER CAMPUS

WELCOME TO CHICAGO

Chicago Architecture Foundation

224 South Michigan Avenue

Start your day with the Chicago Architecture Foundation's "Historic Downtown: Rise of the Skyscraper" tour, which begins daily at 10am year-round. The 2-hour walking tour takes you to the oldest high-rises in the Loop, and the docents explain why these early office buildings were revolutionary. Sure, you'll get a basic architecture education, but this is also a great way to get a sense of the Loop's layout and dramatic canyonlike vistas. (Another popular tour, "Modern Skyscrapers," starts daily at 1pm.)

Buckingham Fountain

1410 Museum Campus Drive

This grand stone fountain is one of the city's iconic structures. (If you're a sitcom fan, you might recognize it from the opening credits of Married with Children.) Try to get here on the hour, when jets of water spurt dramatically into the sky. The fountain blazes with colored lights at night, so if you're staying downtown, it's also worth a stop after dark.

Wrigley Field

1060 West Addison Street

If you're a baseball fan, Wrigley is hallowed ground: the second-oldest stadium in the major leagues, home to the perennially jinxed Chicago Cubs. The surrounding blocks are a good place to stock up on Cubs souvenirs. If you want to catch a game, tickets can be tough to come by (the entire season tends to be sold out by Opening Day). Show up an hour or so before a game, and you can sometimes find a season ticket holder trying to sell unused seats (and ticket brokers always have seats available -- for a price).

Millennium Park

201 East Randolph Street

Just north of the Art Institute is one of the city's most popular gathering spots. Check out the massive video-screen faces on the Crown Fountain, then take a walk around (and under) Anish Kapoor's bean-shaped sculpture, Cloud Gate. The Pritzker Music Pavilion, designed by Frank Gehry, features the architect's signature ribbons of silver steel; Gehry also designed the adjoining serpentine bridge.

Michigan Avenue Bridge

North Michigan Avenue

Walk north along Michigan Avenue and you'll come to this bridge, which spans the Chicago River. Stop here for a great photo op -- on a nice day, you'll be joined by plenty of other visitors doing the exact same thing.

The Magnificent Mile

North Michigan Avenue

The 14-block stretch of Michigan Avenue from the river to Oak Street, known as the "Magnificent Mile," is shopping central, a dense concentration of high-rise malls, designer boutiques, and practically every mass-market clothing brand. Even if you're not a shopper, it's worth a stroll; busy at almost all hours, it's great for people-watching. Architecture buffs will also appreciate a stroll down this street, thanks to the eclectic collection of buildings.

Hancock Observatory

875 North Michigan Avenue

This may only be Chicago's third-tallest building, but the view from the top is spectacular: In the right weather conditions, you can see all the way to three other states (Wisconsin, Indiana, and Michigan). The "talking telescopes" help you get your bearings by pointing out landmarks in each direction.

Second City

1616 North Wells Street

Just because the sun goes down doesn't mean the fun has to end. Located several blocks west of the Chicago History Museum is the original Second City, a lively comedy club that has kept Chicago in stitches for more than 50 years. Second City has since expanded to include a theater in Toronto and several training centers. But it was here in the Windy City that many popular jokesters -- including Bill Murray, John Candy, Mike Myers, Chris Farley, Tina Fey, Steve Carell, Amy Poehler and Stephen Colbert -- launched their careers. If you're looking for a laugh, this is the place to go.

Art Institute of Chicago

111 South Michigan Avenue

Home to the country's most impressive collection of Impressionist and Post-Impressionist art (as well as works from numerous other genres), the Art Institute of Chicago is a must for any art aficionado. Even if paintings don't spark your interest, this downtown museum has all sorts of intriguing artifacts, from European armor to the Thorne Miniature Rooms, which showcase interior design and furnishings in Europe and America from the 17th to 20th centuries. The museum also hosts numerous series of films, lectures and special presentations.

Lincoln Park Zoo

2200 North Cannon Drive

Referred to by many as one of Chicago's most beloved treasures, the Lincoln Park Zoo is home to dozens of species ranging from lions to cockroaches. Visitors are invited to view the zoo's furry (or scaly) friends in their natural habitats: Check out the gorillas in the sprawling Regenstein Center for African Apes, or head to the Kovler Penguin and Seabird House to get up close and personal with puffins and razorbills.

Willis (Sears) Tower

233 South Wacker Drive

If you don't mind waiting in exorbitantly long lines, a trip to the top of the Willis (Sears) Tower is one of the quintessential Chicago experiences. Located in the heart of the Loop, this 110-story tower is one of the tallest buildings in the world. The Skydeck on the 103rd floor offers spectacular views of Lake Michigan and Chicago's impressive skyline.

Bandera Restaurant ($$)

535 North Michigan Avenue

A Southwestern “take on American favorites”, including “top-notch rotisserie chicken”, “skillet cornbread” and “huge salads”, is on offer at this “comfortable” chain link with a “high-profile” Streeterville location “overlooking Michigan Avenue”; “polite” service, live jazz and “dim lighting in the evening” add to the “inviting” ambiance – just be prepared to “fight with the tourists” for a window seat.

Frontera Grill ($$)

445 North Clark Street

“Celeb” chef-owner Rick Bayless’ “deep passion” shows at his “legendary” River North flagship that “elevates Mexican cuisine to a higher order”, offering “perfectly executed”, “imaginative” dishes with the “right balance of flavor and spice” plus “heavenly margaritas”, all set down by “consistently efficient”, “well-informed” servers in “festive”, “artwork-themed” digs; limited reservations mean it’s “very difficult to get a table” and waits are “extremely long”, but believers call it “the gold standard” for the genre (adjacent “Topolobampo is the platinum standard”), so “if it isn’t worth the wait, what is?”

Grand Lux Cafe ($$)

600 North Michigan Avenue

A more “upscale” version of the Cheesecake Factory, this River North Eclectic offers a similar “monstrous-sized menu” in “glitzy” grand cafe-style environs “overlooking Michigan Avenue”; it’s “touristy, yes”, but “fair prices” given the “oversized portions” earn favor as does “fast”, “genuinely friendly” service, so as with the original, “plan to wait and wait.”

MK ($$$)

868 North Franklin Avenue

“Among the finest in Chicago”, this Near North New American from Michael Kornick has “all the right ingredients”, with “thoughtful, unique” meals that “reflect the seasons”, “show-stealing” desserts and a “spectacular” wine list all offered by “accommodating” staffers; the “swanky” loftlike area is “bustling”, the mezzanine “more intimate” and “everyone leaves happy – except the guy stuck with the tab.”

The Gage ($$)

24 South Michigan Avenue

“In a row of ordinary eateries”, this “über-hip” gastropub is an “upscale surprise”, “really delivering” with chef Dirk Flanigan’s “adventurous”, “awe-inspiring” New American eats and a “phenomenal beer selection” in “just plain cool” Loop digs featuring an “excellent view of Millennium Park”; enthusiasts justify the “packed and loud” conditions as “part of its charm” and give “attentive” service props too, so most excuse prices that may be a “tad high” for the genre.

*Restaurant reviews and pricing guidelines provided by Zagat.
Reservations are highly recommended!*

Berghoff Café ($$)

17 West Adams Street

“Faithfully prepared” German “classics” like “schnitzel and co.” “dominate” the midpriced menu at this redone Loop “landmark”, a “sentimental favorite” where “honest, generous” eats and drinks take you “back in time” – and lure in plenty of “tourists” too; “charming” and “faithful to the original” in many ways (the house-label microbrew and “best homemade root beer” remain), it’s bittersweet for those who “hope the old Berghoffs will magically reappear” and note the “staff clearly isn’t from Bavaria anymore”; P.S. the downstairs cafe and airport spin-off are also “reliable” for “hearty sandwiches.”

The Villiage ($$)

71 West Monroe Street

Open since 1927 (and run by the grandchildren of the original owner), this downtown dining landmark houses three separate Italian restaurants that are popular with pre- and post-theater crowds. Each has its own menu and ambiance, but the sentimental favorite is the Village, on the second floor, a charmingly retro interpretation of alfresco dining in a small Italian town, complete with a midnight-blue ceiling, twinkling ‘stars,’ and banquettes tucked into private, cavelike rooms. The food is old-school Italian: eggplant parmigiana, a heavy fettuccine Alfredo that would send your cardiologist into fits, veal scaloppini, and even calves’ liver.

Who has the best Chicago-style pizza... You Decide!

Giordano's ($$)

730 North Rush Street

Pie partisans maintain they make “magic” at this string of “classic” “stuffed pizza” specialists (the “scrumptious thin crust” has its supporters too) known for “consistency, extremely fresh sauce”, “cheesy goodness” and “overflowing toppings”; service may come “with a smile” but “doesn’t rise above the neighborhood pizza joint” genre, and ambiance varies by location, but the price is “decent” and most deem it an overall “crowd-pleaser”; P.S. you can “expect to wait” during prime time, so “order ahead to speed things up.”

Gino's East Chicago ($$)

633 North Wells Street

“Deep-dish reigns supreme” at these “landmark pizza emporiums” judged “just plain good” for their “Chicago-style” pies and “out-of-this-world” cornmeal crusts; they “don’t waste any money” on the “pleasantly grungy” surrounds and service can be “inconsistent”, but fans insist you still “can’t go wrong”, so “bring your sharpie” to “graffiti the walls” – after the “food coma” wears off of course.

Lou Malnati's Pizzeria ($)

439 North Wells Street

“Come with an appetite” to this “iconic” chain, “the place to go if you want to experience Chicago-style deep-dish” say pie-zani “OMG”-ing over the “thick”, “incredible” butter crust, “ooey gooey, nicely stretchy cheese” and sausage plenty “enough to feed an army”, plus “respectable” thin-crust pies and “fantastic” salads too; the staff is “friendly” and though the decor strikes some as “humble”, most barely notice, wishing only that “made-to-order” ‘zas didn’t result in “a bit of a wait.”
